

Emcee in the Spotlight

atex
the attendee experience co.

Introducing one of the team; corporate event emcee and emcee in residence specialist Quinn Conyers. A master moderator and luxury language expert.

Where in the world are you based, Quinn?

Baltimore, Maryland on the East Coast of the United States.

Tell us about your journey to becoming a professional emcee. Why did the profession call to you?

Speaking has always been my gift. It was until the Pandemic that I was on an audio-only app called Clubhouse my gift as an Emcee/Moderator shined. The more I hosted rooms the more people asked me if I did this professionally and I started to get hired for virtual moderators and emcee gigs. At that point, I DECIDED to go all in as an Emcee. I revamped my website to have my Emcee and Emcee in Residence services be my priority focus for Event Planners to book me. I also realized there are 3 levels of success. You can be Good, Great, or Grand at something. I knew I was good and great at being a Keynote Speaker, however, I was GRAND at being an Emcee and it showed every time I stepped on ANY virtual or in-person stage.

What motivates you to do what you do?

I want to change the world with my words and leave a legacy with my language. I am motivated to be a living breathing example to other Black women, especially from small towns with BIG dreams you can create a lucrative career/entrepreneurship path that serves you despite your environment or having an example.

What are your biggest accomplishments as a professional emcee?

My emcee stages included working with PayPal, Visa, Black Girl Ventures, Black Ambition, Nike, and M&T Bank) Also co-hosting alongside Daymond John from Shark Tank to name a few.

Quinn Conyers

What are your top 3 event planning tips?

- 1 Hire an Emcee early in the planning process to partner with you and serve as your Layered Learning Consultant!
- 2 Don't use internal staff as an Emcee, hire a professional!
- 3 Allow your Event Emcee to elevate and enhance your event beyond the stage!

Contact us to find out more about booking Quinn for your next event atex.world